The Passion Play.

Prof. E. F. Grieb, of Milwaukee, will present the "Passion Play of Oberammergau," at St. Stephen's church, on Friday evening of next week, the 29th inst. It is a grand scenic production, accompanied by over 100 stereotypical pictures, and is accompanied by a learned lecture as each part or scene is presented. The origin of the Passion Play, which has attracted considerable attention of late, was among the mountains of the province of Bavaria, Germany. About the year 1630, the people of Oberammergau were visited by a plague which carried off many hundreds of its inhabitants. These humble peasants at last having been delivered from the pestilence by what they firmly believed to be the intervention of Divine Providence, resolved to commemorate the event by truthfully depicting every ten years, if possible, the grandest drama ever enacted on any stage of the world's history, viz: the life, passion and death of Christ from the birth of the child of Bethlehem to the consummation of His life on Calvary. The play was afterwards discontinued, to be resumed in 1811, and since then has been perfected by every resource known to the dramatic art. Admission 25 cents. Don't forget the date.

The Plan Not Abandoned.

The matter of establishing a free library in Stevens Point, which has been dormant for some time, has not been abandoned. A meeting of the executive committees of the Forum and Woman's Clubs was held at the Curran House parlors, last Friday evening, at which time it was determined to make an effort to raise $1,000 instead of $2,500, as originally intended. Mr. Andra's offer of $500 will remain good proportionately to the amount raised, and he will furnish the room, rent free, as agreed. R. B. Park was chosen chairman of the committee. Mrs. Henry Curran secretary and Mrs. J. R. Congdon treasurer.

Ended With Blows.

There was a scrimmage last Monday evening at about six o'clock, that ended quite seriously for one of the parties. The John Rice & Bro. Co. are the plaintiffs in a case against Louis Wiesner, over the purchase of a feed cutter. Wiesner went to the Rice & Bro. office at the time above mentioned, and after a short conversation, in which Mr. Rice says he became very abusive, was ordered out. This he refused to do, when Mr. Rice put his hand on Wiesner's shoulder, and in return was struck in the face. Wiesner then ran out, being followed by Rice, and when near the outer edge of the walk, the former turned about and struck the latter with a revolver, piercing the left cheek.

Wiesner denies having had a revolver in his possession, says he only struck with his fist, and that the wound in Mr. Rice's face must have been made by the latter falling down. Wiesner was arrested, appeared before Judge Murat this morning, entering a plea of not guilty to the charge of assault with intent to do great bodily harm, and the examination was adjourned until next Friday morning at 9 o'clock.

Julius Jentsch is Dead.

Ernest Julius Jentsch, who conducted a dry goods store at 124 S. Third street since May, 1892, and also resided in the same building, died at his home last Thursday morning at twenty minutes past 3 o'clock, of consumption, after an illness of nearly six months. Mr. Jentsch was a native of Nimmersatt, Province of Oberschlesia, Germany, where he was born thirty-nine years ago the 14th of September. Leaving the Fatherland in 1881, he came direct to the iron country of Northern Wisconsin and Michigan, where he remained a few months and then came to Portage county, securing a position in the McMillan saw mill. For the following eight or nine years he clerked in A. A. Walbridge's store at Plover, for S. S. Bardwell, of Plainfield, and the C. O. D. store, this city. He also ran a general store at Plover for about two years and three years ago last spring embarked in business here, forming a partnership with his father-in-law, John C. Young. Julius was one of the most attentive and obliging gentlemen, and although they started in business with very little capital and a small stock, a good trade had been worked up and their line of goods largely increased. Oct. 9th, 1890, Mr. Jentsch was married to Miss Sophia Young, who survives him. He also leaves three brothers and two sisters in Germany. A devout member of the German M. E. church, his loss will be severely felt by the congregation in this city, and especially by the pastor, Rev. B. B. Schlung, as the latter gentleman could always depend upon Mr. Jentsch to do the lion's share of any church work to be performed. The deceased was also a member of Plover Camp, No. 747, Modern Woodmen of America, in which order he carried $3,000 life insurance. Short services were conducted at the house last Saturday morning, by Rev. Schlung, after which the remains were conveyed to the German Methodist church in Almond, where an impressive funeral sermon was preached at 2 o'clock that afternoon by Mr. Schlung. Revs. Nitsell and Entzinger also assisted in the services at Almond. The pallbearers were Frank Tyler, Will. Calkins, John Herman, and A. Marlatt, of Plover, and J. W. Strope, of this city, all brother Woodmen.

A BEAUTIFUL SPOT

Which Next Season Will be Converted Into a Summer Resort by J. A. Ennor.

A tract of land just north of the city limits, containing 53 acres of land, was last Saturday sold by Owen Clark to J. A. Ennor. The consideration is private, but the purchaser seems to be well satisfied with his bargain, having already been offered one-half of the purchase price of the whole for an interest in only a fraction. The property is north of the water works, along the banks of the Wisconsin river, and extends out to the old Wausau road. It also includes what is known as "third island," embracing from 18 to 20 acres, and will make a most desirable spot for picnics and pleasure parties. This island is heavily covered with majestic pine and maple trees, and none of them will be disturbed by the new owner. Mr. Ennor will call his new purchase "Woodland Park," a name most appropriate, and in the early spring will commence making improvements upon the same. Winding paths will be made around and throughout the island, a band and speaker's stand will be erected on a commanding elevation in the center, and which is forty feet higher than the surroundings. The island is between the river and Messers slough, and will be connected with the east bank by a pile and pontoon bridge, which will be used by pedestrians only, no teams being allowed on the grounds.

The island will be transformed into one of the finest summer resorts in the state, and for the purchase of which Mr. Ennor had been negotiating for several months. We believe it is now in the right hands, and the new owner is to be congratulated for his enterprise and good fortune. The island can be reached by boat in fifteen or twenty minutes, and three or four small steamers will ply the waters of the old Wisconsin next season, besides one or two of larger proportions. The grounds can also be reached by team after a short and pleasant drive from the business part of the city, and they will be found most desirable next year, when Stevens Point will be the convention center of Wisconsin.

Will Go to Illinois.

The meeting of the Winnebago Presbytery, held last Friday evening in this city, was brief and to the point. Short addresses were made by Rev. J. E. Chapin, of Neenah, and Rev. E. P. Rankin, of this city, after which the pastoral relations of the latter were formally dissolved. Mr. Rankin will preach his farewell sermon here on Sunday next, and will thereafter remove to Toledo, Illinois, a town of about one thousand inhabitants, and the seat of Cumberland county, arriving there in time for Thanksgiving. Mr. Rankin and his estimable family will be greatly missed in Stevens Point, and there are hundreds outside, as well as within his church, who regret their departure, honoring and esteeming the reverend gentleman for his many noble qualities of both head and heart, as well as his ability and judgment, and hope that their new home may prove a pleasant and happy one.

LIVING PICTURES.

Last Saturday Evening's Entertainment at the Normal a Grand Success.

The entertainment given in the Normal gymnasium, last Saturday evening, under the head of Miss Tanner and Mr. Forest Grant, proved a thorough success and fully reached the highest expectations of all. It was the first entertainment of the kind ever produced in this city, and while widely attended the audience would have been much larger had the people thoroughly understood the treat in store. The stage settings consisted of a raised platform in front of which were swung frames of three different sizes, in proportion to the picture to be shown. These frames were covered with tulle, which dimmed the vision just enough to make it seem to the observer as though the life-size picture was before him. A long line of curtains crossed the gymnasium, to conceal the actors and stage, these curtains being hung from rings and were opened and closed in front of the frame. Light was obtained by means of two large shaded lamps and two locomotive headlights, which were operated in such a manner as to throw the rays upon the person behind the screen without leaving a shadow. The different people and the part each took was as follows:

A Grand Concert.

The concert given at Central City Opera House, last Thursday evening, by the Eintrachts Verein, for the benefit and under the management of Prof. Louis A. Schidlo, was liberally attended and proved one of the finest musical treats heard in Stevens Point in many a day. The Amphion band played the opening and closing pieces, and at both times elicited the hearty applause of which they are so deserving, this today, under the leadership of Dell. Wright, being one of the finest bands in the state. The Eintrachts Verein were also on for two vocal numbers, both of which they sang in an excellent manner, the improvement in the chorus of this society having been very marked since Prof. Schidlo took them in hand. Misses Lillie Bethach and Minnie Johnson rendered a piano duet and Miss Alice Gross a piano solo, and both were played in a manner to reflect credit upon those young ladies, the pieces being most difficult. The soprano solo by Miss Ethel Kirwan, "The Nightingale," was sung in that young lady's charming manner, and to a hearty encore she responded with a little German ditty, which was also very sweet. The Woman's Club Octette, consisting of Mesdames Jos. Forsyth, Chas. Raymond, G. E. McDill, W. W. Taylor, Ed. Stitt and G. E. Oster, and Misses Ethel Kirwan and Ada Walker, favored the audience with two songs, both of which were given in a manner that pleased all present, while the marches of the Amphion orchestra brought forth deserving applause. The alto solo of Miss Eva Fischer and the soprano solo of Miss Ava Felker were both excellent. The Mandolin orchestra were on the program, but owing to the inability of some of its members to reach here, they being at Wausau the number had to be omitted.

The concert closed with a grand ball, which was well attended. The net receipts of the entertainment were about $75.00. During the day Prof. Schidlo received a telegram from Miss Bertha Schmetzer, Chicago, who said, "Best of success to your concert," and on Friday one from Leopoldine Schneider, St. Louis, which read as follows: "Accept congratulations in honor of your reputation at benefit concert."

Twice Ever Thus.

Harry Furlott, who was charged with stealing a bicycle which he had put up for security for board at the Wisconsin House, and was to have an examination before Justice Carpenter, on Monday, failed to answer when his name was called and hasn't been seen since. Furlott was employed by C. W. Hunter, former proprietor of the Press, who also left in a sudden manner, one week ago, for pastures green and new, without taking a fond farewell of several who now wish they knew him not.

—Neil McCallum, round house foreman for the Central company, at Ashland, spent Sunday in the city. Mrs. McCallum and children had been visiting at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. O'Brien, and will remain another week or more.

—Some of the Forum Club being absent from the city, and others having engagements elsewhere, the meeting of last Friday evening was postponed for two weeks, when a paper on journalism, prepared by the editor of this paper, will be presented.

—The Mrs. Griffith residence, corner of Ellis and Fremont streets, in which a lamp recently exploded, was occupied by Martin Warnke and family. The loss was mostly caused by smoke, and this was adjusted on Friday last on payment of $160.

—A message from Rhinelander, last Friday, brought the pleasant information that Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Clifford are the parents of a little son. The number of gray hairs in the grandfather's locks have not perceptibly increased since the news was received.

—Thos. Francis returned from Omro, last Friday evening, where he spent two or three months visiting with relatives. The story was quite generally circulated here a few weeks ago that Mr. Francis had died. The gentleman, however, not only denies the allegation but "defies the allegator," and is a living proof of his own assertion.

—Albert Szabelski, proprietor of the Era Cycle Works, 300 N. Second street, can not only turn out a strictly first-class bicycle but is also a good all-around mechanic, and now devotes his spare time in the construction of a 3 horse power engine, which he expects to have in working order within a month. The Era works will put a wheel on the market next season for $30.

—Earl Stilson, of Galesburg, Ill., has been engaged as bookkeeper and shipping clerk at the Wisconsin River Paper Co. plant, commencing his duties on Monday, and his family will arrive in a few days, to go to house-keeping at Whiting. Mr. Stilson is a brother of Mrs. G. E. McDill, and was formerly an engineer on the C. & Q. R. R.

—Some person intends to keep warm this winter at J. P. Dorsey's expense. On Friday night last, between 9:30 and 10 o'clock, someone entered his livery stable office and took a valuable Irish freeze ulster. Mr. Dorsey had stepped into his residence for a few moments, and the thief took advantage of his absence to do the work. The owner would pay liberally to apprehend the guilty person.

—An "old folks" Demorest medal contest will be held at Temperance Hall, next Monday evening, Nov. 25. Several good speakers will take part and all should turn out to hear them.

—Andrew P. Een and sister, Miss Augusta, who have been making their home on the old homestead near Amherst, expect to remove to this city in a few days, or as soon as a suitable house can be secured.

—Every farmer and stock raiser in the vicinity of Milladore, and for miles around, should remember the Farmers' Institute, which will be held at Empey's Hall, in that village, on the 5th and 6th of December. It will be conducted by Thos. Convey.

—The fire department was called out, Sunday noon, by a fire that had started in a wood box at the store of Green Bros., south side of public square. The fire undoubtedly started from a match or cigar stub, but was quickly put out, with slight damage, and without the aid of the department.

—O. A. Everts, mail agent on the Wisconsin Central, who has made Milladore his home for a number of years, removed to Ashland, last week, his run being between that city and Abbotsford. Mr. Everts owned a store at Milladore until recently, and this he disposed of to P. H. Heinrichs, formerly of Watertown.

—Among the attorneys from outside the city who have been attending court here this week, are Irving P. Lord, Waupaca; Chas. Barber, J. C. Thompson and Ben Hooper, Oshkosh; H. Wiperman, Grand Rapids; A. J. Smith, Amherst; S. A. Corning, Plainfield; J. F. Cole, Marshfield.

—B. B. Park, F. J. Carpenter, A. R. and J. A. Week, J. N. Welsby, Bert Bowdish, and Mrs. A. Gilbert and sons, Thos. and Willie, witnessed the great foot ball contest, at Minneapolis, last Saturday. It was between the Wisconsin and Minnesota University teams, and resulted in a victory for the latter, 14 to 10.

—R. Patrick, of Ashland, and J. J. Kenney, of Iron River, were in the city, last night, being on their way north from Madison. The former met so many old time acquaintances that he had to be placed under arrest by his companion, for the time spent with each might be shortened, and then he could not see half of them.

—Special exercises appropriate for Thanksgiving will be held at the High School next Wednesday afternoon, commencing at 2 o'clock. Selections will be read from Scott's "Lady of the Lake," and several vocal and instrumental numbers will undoubtedly be contributed by pupils and teachers. A cordial invitation is extended to the public.

—D. Lloyd Jones and A. W. Sanborn came down from Ashland, last Saturday morning, the former having been there and at West Superior for a few days. Three miles this side of Ashland the train ran upon a man who intended to work for a party at White River, six miles south of Ashland, but when they arrived there the wages were not satisfactory and they started to walk back. All were intoxicated, the man who was killed being more so than the others, and he was left by his companions, only to be run down by the train.

—The supper and entertainment given by the gentlemen of the M. E. church, last Friday evening, was a great social and financial success. Everything was managed and arranged by the men, the waiters being fitted out with regulation white aprons, and they looked as genteel and gave each patron as prompt attention as though they had long since received instructions from some noted caterer. The supper was followed by a social entertainment, and the net receipts were about $50.00. Music was furnished during the evening by Prof. Duncan and Carl Cadman.

—Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Lamoreux and little daughter returned to the city, last Thursday morning, after a three weeks trip to the east. Part of this time was spent in Washington, D. C., and they also had the pleasure of visiting with S. B. Coleman and family, at Sodus Center, N. Y., with W. A. Roe and family, at Newark, N. Y., and Albert Grant, at Annapolis, Md. Both Messrs. Coleman and Roe are engaged in the flouring mill business, living about six miles apart, and are meeting with excellent success. Mr. Grant is an instructor in the naval academy at Annapolis.

—The funeral of Miss Olive Crosby, whose sudden death was announced last week, took place from the Episcopal church on Friday afternoon, and was very largely attended, a number of people being present from different parts of the county. Those here from abroad were Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Wilson, of Knowlton; Mrs. John Collier, of Centralia; Miss Ida Carmen, of Grand Rapids, and Mrs. Richard Powers, of Mosinee. The pallbearers were John Cadman, F. L. Dille, David Whitney, Dr. Hadcock, Ed. Sawyer, Ira Eldredge, V. P. Atwell and B. L. Vaughn. The altar and chancel were beautifully decorated with flowers presented by the ladies of the different societies connected with the church.

INVENTIONS IN GLASS

FREAKS OF VITREOUS INGENUITY IN THE PATENT OFFICE.

Glass Houses to Live In, Glass Clothing to Wear and a Glass Coffin to Rest In at Last—Strange and Uncommon Devices That Are Not Yet Publicly Known.

There is an inventor who is known at the patent office in Washington as the glass man. His name is C. W. McLean of New Bern, N. C., and during the last few years he has obtained patents for a surprising number of devices in glass.
 Among these is a glass coffin, which is guaranteed proof against decay and rats.
 So long as no deliberate attempt is made to smash it it ought to last forever. Another contrivance is a staircase made wholly of glass, steps, landings and newel post being all of that material. Yet another is a glass barrel. But perhaps the most remarkable invention of the glass man is a billiard table of glass.

The day may yet arrive when people will live in glass houses. A patent has been secured by another inventor for glass bricks of a peculiar pattern. The material of which they are composed being a first rate nonconductor, these bricks will keep the cold out of a dwelling built of them, while admitting the light. It is claimed they will exclude noise, being hollow. Furthermore, the inmates of a glass house need not be afraid of being under too close observation by neighbors, inasmuch as it is not requisite that the bricks shall be transparent. They may be of opaque ground glass or of any color that may be suitable for decorative effect.

Thus before many years have passed it may be considered the height of luxury to occupy a dwelling of glass. Glass bricks, of course, are expensive. People who live in glass houses will be able to afford to wear clothes of glass. That sounds like nonsense, but the fact is that beautiful and most delicate fabrics are made out of spun glass. Nearly 20 years ago there was shown at the Centennial exposition in Philadelphia a bonnet composed entirely of glass. It was a love of a bonnet. The flowers on it were glass, and so were the ribbons, which looked like the finest satin.
 The patentees of this process describe it as suitable for the manufacture of neckties, shawls, table covers, etc.

In fabrics of this kind a very fine quality of glass is used. It is spun in threads of exceeding delicacy, and of these several colors may be produced at the same time.
 They are woven in a loom of ordinary pattern.
 Anybody may observe that a thin sheet of glass is somewhat elastic. The threads employed in weaving are of such fineness as to be perfectly pliable and not at all brittle. With a gown of glass would naturally go a pair of glass slippers.

A Pittsburg man named Smith has invented a process for making glass slippers in molds. They would not do very well for dancing. There is no reason why a glass gown should not be woven of iridescent glass, so that the wearer would look like an animated rainbow on a ballroom floor—one dazzling shimmer of ever changing hues. Until recently the manufacture of iridescent glass was set down in the list of the lost arts. But in 1878 it was rediscovered, and now it is a common commercial article. It is made by exposing the melted glass to the vapors of salts of sodium. At the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in New York city, are exhibited great numbers of bottles, plates and other articles of glass which were made and used long before Christ was born. They were dug up in Cyprus and elsewhere. Many of them have a beautiful iridescence, but it is the result of decay. Glass will rot like anything else, and decay has split the structure of this ancient glass into laminae, or flakes, which interrupt the light so as to produce brilliant red, green, purple and other rainbow colors.

The window blinds of the glass house of the future will be of glass, of course. That is another patent, and the inventor suggests that such blinds may be made of whatever colors are desired. Baby in the nursery perhaps will play with glass building blocks and at a suitable age he will receive a Christmas gift of a pair of roller skates with glass rollers. Both of these ideas have been patented. When he is old enough to go fishing, he will not dig worms in the garden, but will be provided with artificial bait in the shape of a hollow minnow of glass, coated on the inside partly with a solution of gold or silver and partly with a luminous paint.

Glass budtends may be proof against lightning and bugs, but it is hardly to be expected that glass houses should be free from mice. The inmates could hardly do better than to employ glass traps for the capture of such vermin. The great advantage of the glass mousetrap, according to the statement of the inventor, is that "if one mouse enters the trap he may be seen by others who chance to go that way, and they will be inclined to join the one inside, especially when they observe that he is nibbling a choice morsel." Up to date the glass mousetrap has not made itself popular, notwithstanding the important arguments in its favor, and of most of the other devices described it is unfortunately true that they have not proved profitable to the persons who contrived them.
 This remark, however, by no means applies to the glass lemon squeezer, which is already a familiar household utensil. The inventor of it is said to have sold his rights for $50,000. One of the most remarkable inventions in glass, by the way, was that of a Venetian named Jaquin, in 1656. He noticed that the scales of a fish catch the bluish green milky hue to the water, and that glass beads dipped into such water looked like pearls when dried. Subsequently the idea was conceived of making hollow beads of glass and lining them with the peculiar substance from the scales of the fish, and it is in this way that the so-called Roman pearls are now manufactured. It is to this substance that the iridescence of the scales of many species of fishes is due.—Washington Cor. Philadelphia Times.

To Increase Rex Begonias.
 If you wish to raise a number of new plants of Rex or other large leafed begonias, take a sharp knife and make a cut at the intersection of the veins. Then lay the leaf, veined side down, on a saucer of wet sand, place in a sunny window and keep damp. Tiny plants will form at the cuts. When an inch high, they may be lifted into thumb pots. This is a very fascinating way to grow begonias.—Wom-ankind.

Po Nine's Pad.
 Pope Pius IX was a collector of allippers.
 He always had 24 pairs in his wardrobe, made of red cloth, embroidered with gold and ornamented with a solid gold cross, his chamberlain being strictly enjoined not to part with a single pair, however well worn they might be, to any of the many devout applicants for them.

"SQUIRMS" A BRITISH PEER.

How Bandy Churchill Pulled Him Down and Unmashed His Title.

Baron "Squirms" is what the members of the house of commons call their colleague, Henry de Worms, who was recently created a British peer in recognition of his work in the international convention on sugar bounties. He has long been an Austrian baron, and has been prominent in British politics for 15 years.

His family were Austrian Jews, but he was born in England, and in 1840, his father being Baron Solomon Benedict de Worms and his mother Henrietta, daughter of Samuel Moses Samuel of London.
 Young De Worms was educated at King's college, London, and was elected a fellow of the institution in 1868.

The same year he was called to the bar of the Inner Temple, and for some time practiced as a special pleader. He was also a partner in the house of George Worms & Co., merchants of Austin-friars. In 1864 he married Fanny, the eldest daughter of the famous Viennese banker, Baron von Todesco, but the union proved unhappy, and the couple were divorced. The baron's present wife is a daughter of Sir Benjamin Phillips, the great toy manufacturer. For a time the baron was a magistrate and deputy lieutenant for Middlesex, and he is a fellow of the Royal Asiatic society.

In 1880 he was elected to parliament as a Conservative in place of Mr. Gladstone. In 1891 he was appointed undersecretary for the colonies, and he expected to be under foreign secretary in the present regime of Premier Salisbury, but the plum went to George N. Curzon, who not long ago married Miss Mary Leiter, the Chicago heiress.

"Squirms" is said to be somewhat vain and inclined to spread eagle oratory.
 It is stated that when Lord Randolph Churchill was leader in the commons he told "Squirms" to make a short speech stirring up Gladstone. After the baron had talked five minutes Churchill saw that the object had been gained and nudged "Squirms" to cease speaking.
 Unheeding, the baron talked on, and Churchill pulled his coat tails and whispered, "Sit down, will you?" The baron refused to have his eloquence shut off, and Churchill completely lost his temper. "Dash it, man, sit down!" he cried, jerking the baron's coat tails so forcibly that "Squirms" suddenly sat down upon his silk hat, which exploded with a loud report.

THE ONLY WOMAN ENGINEER.

Mrs. Gretton Knows Her Business and Ran the Woman's Building at Chicago.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gretton does not pine for the ballot or bloomers, but she can run a stationary engine and "fire" when the fireman is sick as well as any man on earth. She is the only woman engineer in the country, it is said, and she knows her business from the ground up.
 Her love of mechanics was born in her, and when other girls of her age were playing with paper dolls and making mud pies she was studying every piece of machinery she could get near. In time she married A. H. Gretton, engineer of Haylin's theater, Chicago, and he gave her all the opportunities in his power to study machinery. In 1891 she accepted a position as stationary engineer of the panorama called "The Crucifixation" and was placed in charge of the entire plant.

She was later employed at Haylin's theater, and when the World's fair opened was appointed to the very responsible post of engineer at the Woman's building. She had charge of the en-

MRS. ELIZABETH GRETTON. tire plant and filled her position to the entire satisfaction of the board of lady managers.

During all the time that she has been employed at her trade, as she calls the work, Mrs. Gretton has made her own dresses and continued to keep house as usual. In her work in the engine room she has never shirked any task nor avoided any responsibility. She has been inside boilers and has worked around moving machinery whenever required.
 If the fireman failed to show up on time, she would shovel coal into the furnaces and run the entire plant single handed rather than have the wheels of industry clogged.

In spite of her predilection for man's work Mrs. Gretton is a very womanly woman and is devoted to her family and her home. Her ambition now is to become an expert electrical engineer.

Poisoning by Tinned Food.
 The London Lancet suggested as a safeguard against poisoning by the use of tinned food that canners be compelli-ed to label the tins with a notice that the contents are perfectly wholesome when eaten fresh from the tin and afford good food, but the public is advised not to expose the contents for any length of time to the injurious influences of the atmosphere.

THE MANATEE.

It Is One of the Strangest of Animals Native to America.

Of all the large animals of the American continent, none is more remarkable in form than the manatee.

Although this strange creature is of goodly size, often reaching a weight of several hundred pounds and sometimes attaining a length of 13 feet, yet I venture to say that not more than one person out of every 4,000 in the United States could now arise and correctly answer the question, "What is a manatee?" Whenever you mention the name of the creature to any one save a student of quadrupeds, of a survey you will have that question to answer forthwith.

The manatee is an animal that lives exclusively in the water, and while it is shaped somewhat like a seal it is very far from being one. I mention the seal by way of comparison solely because it is the only quadruped which can be used. The heavy, baglike body, short neck, blunt nose and round head of our harbor seal do indeed suggest the form of the manatee, but there the resemblance stops short.

Instead of having hind flippers like a seal, the body of the manatee terminates in a very broad and very flat tail, which forms an admirable propeller. Its front limbs are simply big, flat paddles, by no means so shapely and useful as the front flippers of a sea lion. It has no hair—or, at least, none to speak of—a smooth, but very thick and tough skin, small, weak eyes and a blunt nose. Instead of having teeth like a seal and feeding on fish, it has only a set of rather weak molars and lives solely on aquatic plants.

It lives in the mouths and lower reaches of rivers that flow into the sea in tropical latitudes, and while it does not object to salt water it is most at home in water that is either brackish or else quite fresh, and the latter is preferred because of its aquatic vegetation. Unlike the seal, it is quite unable to come out on land.

I am glad to be able to say that even today this remarkable animal is an inhabitant of one portion of our strangely diversified United States.

For some particular reason, probably the abundance of good food combined with a good depth of water, a number of manatees have chosen to inhabit the St. Lucie river, Brevard county, Fla., which flows into Indian river, 18 miles above Jupiter inlet. Their presence there has been well known for 20 years or so; but, fortunately for them, they possess neither the checkered leather hide of the sad eyed alligator, the spun glass plumes of the unhappy egret or the delicious flesh of the wild turkey, and so as yet they have not been entirely exterminated.—W. T. Hornaday in St. Nicholas.

Jewish Monotheism.

As Leopold von Ranke truly said, the exodus of the Jews from Egypt and their breaking with the Egyptian theology of nature worship marked the foundation of the civilization of mankind. Monotheism in its very inception placed man upon the highest pedestal of moral purity, spiritual elevation and ideal aspiration. Only for a nationality erected upon the basis of mon-otheism was it possible to proclaim in the hoary past the equality of all men in the community and before the law, which tolerated neither the prerogative of caste nor the privilege of aristocratic station.
 There was no aristocratic, privileged class in Israel; the tribe charged with attending the divine service in the tabernacle and the temple were not to own any property and were dependent altogether upon the people's free and voluntary support.

Under monotheism, there was no distinguished portion, all, as children of the same Father in heaven, were entitled to equal consideration, and as the poor "were to be always with us," the provisions made for their support were adequate and did not degrade them, and could not have that demoralizing influence which today is the heaviest burden which the pauper class has to bear. The sublime attribute of the one and only God, "beside whom there is none," is that of holiness, and to be a follower of God meant to practice holiness, purity in thought and action.
 All the laws ordained, as we find them in the written and the oral laws of the Jews, had no other purpose and were distinctly enjoined for the purpose of training man to a life of moral purity and correct conduct, especially to look upon every man as a brother, the son of his Father in heaven, to whom he is bound in ties of love and brotherly affection.—Minorah.

Might Have Given Them Away.

A traveler just returning from Mexico tells an amusing tale of the attempts of a peddler to sell precious stones at an exorbitant price, who in the end consented to dispose of his wares for a mere song. It was at Queretaro, an important city on the line of the Mexican Central railroad.
 "When the train pulled in at the depot," said he, "it was immediately surrounded by a score or more of peons trying to sell opals to the passengers. One tall, rather fine looking Indian extended toward me his hand containing ten or dozen glittering stones.
 "How much?" I asked.
 "Twelve dollars," replied he. "Cheap, very cheap, only $12."
 "No, no!" I replied in an emphatic way.
 "My car!" (very dear).
 "Five dollars," then quoted the vender, turning the stones over in his hand that I might see that they were all there."
 "No, $1," said I.
 "Yes, yes!" cried the vender eagerly.
 "One dollar; yes, yes, you can have them for $1. Take them!"—New York Herald.

The Electric Ray.

Among the fish which are capable of giving severe electrical shocks the torpedo or electric ray, a member of the skate tribe, stands out prominently. This fish has a couple of complex batteries lodged in the sides of its head parts, and the discharge of these organs is fraught with dire effects to the animals which may chance to come into the way of this living magazine. The electricity is generated by the nervous system—that is to say, so much nerve force when passed through or into the electrical organ is converted into electricity. Professor d'Arsonval of the College of France tells us that in the case of a torpedo measuring in diameter 30 centimeters, the shock given by this animal amounted to 20 volts. He lit up several small electrical lamps by the discharge from the fish, and this discharge was powerful enough in some cases to carbonize the lamps. It is said that a powerful torpedo may give a discharge measuring 120 volts.
 This, of course, is more than sufficient to kill prey of ordinary size.—London Illustrated News.

STORIES OF SPIRITS.

STRANGE CASES OF MANIFESTATIONS BY SPOOKS.

Investigated by the Society For Psychical Research. They Are Presented With Strong Backing—Examples Furnished by Widely Separated Countries.
Reverting to the lore of the Psychical Research society, here is a case in which apparitions of the dead and the living were commingled. A lady doctor says that in 1869 she was living in the family of a retired naval officer, Mr. R., and his wife, two miles from a seaport town. Mrs. R., who was the sister of the British consul at Cadiz, married her husband, a widower, in that city. When, after the marriage, they came to England, her husband was unable to find the nurse with whom his youngest child had been left. After a vain search they came to London. One night Mrs. R. saw the sitting room door open.
A beautiful lady came in, followed by a common looking woman, carrying a child about a year old, dressed in a yellow pe-lisse. The lady came up to the bed and said, pointing to the baby: "This is Johnny. You will remember Johnny." She smiled, and Mrs. R. was just going to answer when the vision was gone. Her husband said she had exactly described his first wife, and that the child's name was Johnny. Some days after, returning from Westminster abbey, they lost themselves in a narrow congeries of streets. Suddenly Mrs. R. saw the common looking woman of her vision carrying the baby with a yellow pelisse. She told her husband, who spoke to the woman. After discreet inquiry it turned out that she was the nurse that was wanted, and that the baby was the missing child.

The antithesis of unconscious spiritual manifestation by the living is the conscious severance from the body and a foretaste of death's mystery. Dr. Wilsoe of Skiddy, Kan., whose case was first published in the St. Louis Medical Journal in 1889, apparently died of fever. He was declared to be dead by the physician who attended him. To make assurance doubly sure, needles were thrust deeply into the flesh.
This was done many times. The doctor who pronounced the patient dead subsequently said, "I observed his symptoms closely, and if there are any symptoms marking a patient in articulo mortis that were not present in his case I am ignorant of them." Meanwhile, the spirit of the man alleged to be dead had, according to his own story, discovered itself from the body. The disembodied spirit even contemplated the dwelling of clay it had just quitted. The liberated Dr. Wilsoe was conscious of two weeping ladies in the room (his wife and his sister) and of two gentlemen at the door. With one of these gentlemen he came into contact and, very much to his surprise, perceived that the other party was unconscious of the collision. "I now attempted to gain the attention of the people with the object of comforting them as well as of assuring them of their own immortality. I bowed to them playfully and saluted with my right hand. I passed about among them also, but found that they gave me no heed.
Then the situation struck me as humorous, and I laughed outright." Going out of the house, he noted the redness of the soil and the washes that the rain had made. Presently he found himself in the air, borne along by a pair of hands till he came to where were three prodigious rocks, which, his conductor told him, was the road to the eternal world, whence he could no more return in the flesh. He attempted to pass, but his path was barred by a black cloud, and he knew he was to be stopped. The cloud then touched his face. When he regained consciousness, he found himself at home in his bed very ill.
Now there is abundant evidence to prove that Dr. Wilsoe's wife and sister did not fall a-weeping until he was pronounced dead; there is evidence that the soil and the rain washes were as he described immediately he found utterance, though they must have been very different the last time he saw them with his bodily eyes; there is evidence that he told all these things as soon as he could speak and as often as he was permitted.

The Rev. L. J. Bertrand, a Huguenot minister of Neuilly, Paris, writing in 1819, gives a strange experience that befall him in the Alps 80 years previously. The sleep of death had come upon him as he crouched in the snow upon a ledge of a precipice. His mind continued active, though his body was benumbed. The approach of death was not painful till the last, when there was a dreadful acute pain of momentary duration. "Then," he says, "my life went out." His spirit soared above his body, to which, however, it was still attached by a kind of elastic string.
With the spiritual eye he saw the remainder of his party and their guide in a position where he could not possibly have seen them from the place where his body lay.
He saw that the guide had disobeyed instructions as to the route to be traversed.
He saw the offender take a sly pull at the peripent's own Madeira and eat the abstructed leg of a fowl. Still more wonderful, he saw his wife, who was always nervous about him when he was alpine climbing, going to Lucerne till the following day. "Well, wife," he salloquized, "I am a dead man. Goodby." Suddenly he felt a shock, realized that his party had returned and that the guide was rubbing him with snow to reanimate him. His first attempt at speech was to reproach the guide. "If you had simply untied the string!" he peevishly exclaimed. By and by he taxed the guide with his small misdeeds, and the delinquent ran off in dismay.
When he reached the inn, the guide became delirious, being convinced that the esteemed pastor was the D. It afterward appeared that Mme. Bertrand had set off for Lucerne exactly under the circumstances her husband had noted with the spiritual eye.—Illustrated Modern Art Bismarck and the American Girl.

Dr. Stefansson retells the story of a beautiful American girl from Colorado who went to Kinsington to see Bismarck, who was taking the waters there. Having waited for some days on the sight of the great man, she one day summoned up courage, walked straight up to him and said: "Durchlaucht, I am going to Colorado today. May I shake hands with you before I go?" She took his offered hand and attempted to kiss it, but he promptly said, "In Kinsington we do not kiss hands." And then and there he kissed her on the mouth as tenderly and affectionately as any lover. And yet, remarks Dr. Stefansson, some people will try to make out that Bismarck is blind to a woman's charms.— Westminster Gazette.

A good natured traveler fell asleep in a train and was carried beyond his destination. "Pretty good joke, isn't it?" said a fellow passenger. "Yes, but a little too surrendered," was the rejoinder.

Blacksmiths Stick to Them Notwithstanding the Newer Power Blowers.
The blacksmith's bellows has three boards. When the bellows is set up in position, the middle board is fixed; the upper and lower boards are movable. There is a valve in the middle board and one in the lower board. When the bellows is not in use, the lower board falls as far as the leather will permit it, and that compartment is then filled with air. With the working of the lever and the raising of the lower board the air in the lower compartment is forced through the valve in the middle board into the upper compartment, which is the reservoir, whence it flows through the nozzle of the bellows into the fire. When the pressure from below ceases, the valve in the middle board closes, and the air is then forced out from the upper compartment or reservoir of the bellows by the weight of the upper board. Sometimes this board is weighted to make it expel the air more rapidly and forcibly.
The continuance of the blast without the working of the lever, caused by the gradually sinking upper board of the bellows, may last for a quarter of a minute. It is a highly prized characteristic of the bellows. The blacksmith who is alone is thus enabled, if he should so desire, to use both hands at the fire, or he might go across the shop and be back awaying the lever once more before the blast had ceased.
A good bellows will last for many years without repairs. Blacksmiths' bellows are made in various sizes from 24 inch to 60 inch. The 30 inch is the size most commonly sold. The size is the width at the widest point. Bellows are longer than they are wide, and they are made of different lengths in the same width, ordinary, and long. There are about 15 bellows manufacturers in the country, including three in New York and one in Brooklyn.
Manufacturing and other establishments supplied with power forges are nowadays equipped with power blowers, and there are also various hand blowers, some operated with a crank and some with a lever, and there are now used many portable forges and blowers combined. The sale of modern appliances for blowing forges has increased greatly in recent years, while the sale of bellows has not. But there are shipsmiths and boiler makers, wheelwrights, carriage and wagon makers and others who still use bellows, and almost every horseshoer uses a bellows and profers it to any other means of blowing his fire, so that there are still sold thousands of bellows annually.—New York Sun.

HOW LONDONERS SPEND MONEY.
They Impoverish Themselves In Useless
Health Destroying Pleasures.
Londoners impoverish themselves and make themselves absurdly miserable by their own devices. Most of the things on which they expend their money are vanities or frauds. Their houses and their dress, as we have seen, are pitiful, their special literature often worse than none, their art the pictures on the hoardings, their amusements sensual. Their very holidays are miserable labor, dull excite-ments, almost wholly without physical or mental good or intellectual gain. A time of quiet relaxation or of natural enjoyment is indeed the lot of but few. Crowded excursion trains and the rude company at seaside towns are the infliction of the lower, middle and the working classes, and bank holidays are perhaps as much an injury as a blessing. Railways and steamboats and the means of entertainment are so overcrowded that all healthy, civilized enjoyment is impossible, and so the manners of the people become coarser from the very means that should promote improvement.
On the continent each parish has its isolated fete, well managed and within the means at hand, and thus these fetes are graceful, civilizing entertainments. We in London need such limited local relaxations, so that each part of the metropolis being, as occasion may require, assisted by the others, district holidays might be a means of good alternately to all the population. Probably from more conceit or mental laziness the people are so fond of bliss and monotony that they entirely overlook the ways of providence, in which the multitudinally small and varied is the rule. Monotony and uniformity, the radical evil, are alike apart from providence and healthy human nature.—Quar-

Oldest House in New York.
One of the few relics left of the early colonial days is still standing at Southampton, N. Y. This town claims the pre-eminence of being the oldest English town in the state of New York, and the ancient house referred to was built by Thomas Sayre, one of the first settlers. It was erected in 1648 and has been handed down from father to son in an unbroken line for ten generations, the present owner being the direct descendant of the builder.
At a time of threatened Indian outbreak in 1666 it was one of the rallying places of the inhabitants in case of a night attack.
The descendants of Thomas Sayre are very numerous, both in this state and in New Jersey. The ancient mansion, which stands on the main street of the village, is an object of curious interest to the multitude of city residents who find in that quiet village by the sea a summer resting place.
The massive timbers and covering of thick cedar shingles are sufficient to insure its remaining for years to come as a curious and interesting relic of a long past age. Of no other house in the state can it be said that ten generations have been born and died within its walls.—New York Herald.

Bookshelves.
A pretty room soon lately had stationary bookshelves for its student owner running in single rows about its walls. One row began at each end of the chimney piece, on a line with the mantel board and ran across to the windows at one side and on the other to a closet door. Each row turned the corner without a break. The shelves were narrow slabs of wood, matching the rest of the woodwork in the room. On the lower shelf the books were placed, the upper shelf holding bits of china and bric-a-brac. Across the wide space between the windows the row swelled to the dimensions of two shelves, dropping back again to one shelf to finish its course. The effect was very attractive, and as the room was the workroom of its owner, the limited shelves held all that was needed in the way of reference books.

New Orleans Women.

Blacksmiths Stick to Them Notwithstanding
the Newer Power Blowers.
The blacksmith's bellows has three boards. When the bellows is set up in position, the middle board is fixed; the upper and lower boards are movable. There is a valve in the middle board and one in the lower board. When the bellows is not in use, the lower board falls as far as the
leather will permit it, and that compartment is then filled with air. With the working of the lever and the raising of the lower board the air in the lower compartment is forced through the valve in the middle board into the upper compartment,
which is the reservoir, whence it flows
through the nozzle of the bellows into the fire. When the pressure from below ceases, the valve in the middle board closes, and
the air is then forced out from the upper compartment or reservoir of the bellows
by the weight of the upper board. Sometimes this board is weighted to make it
expel the air more rapidly and forcibly.
The continuance of the blast without the
working of the lever, caused by the gradually sinking upper board of the bellows,
may last for a quarter of a minute. It is a highly prized characteristic of the bellows. The blacksmith who is alone is thus enabled, if he should so desire, to use both
hands at the fire, or he might go across
the shop and be back awaying the lever
once more before the blast had ceased.
A good bellows will last for many years without repairs. Blacksmiths' bellows are made in various sizes from 24 inch to 60 inch. The 30 inch is the size most commonly sold. The size is the width at the widest point. Bellows are longer than they are wide, and they are made of different lengths in the same width, ordinary,
and long. There are about 15 bellows manufacturers in the country, including three in New York and one in Brooklyn.
Manufacturing and other establishments
supplied with power forges are nowadays equipped with power blowers, and there are also various hand blowers, some operated with a crank and some with a lever,
and there are now used many portable forges and blowers combined. The sale of modern appliances for blowing forges has increased greatly in recent years, while
the sale of bellows has not. But there are shipsmiths and boiler makers, wheelwrights, carriage and wagon makers and others who still use bellows, and almost every horseshoer uses a bellows and profers it to any other means of blowing his
fire, so that there are still sold thousands of bellows annually.—New York Sun.

How Londoners Spend Money.
They Impoverish Themselves In Useless
Health Destroying Pleasures.
Londoners impoverish themselves and
make themselves absurdly miserable by their own devices. Most of the things on which they expend their money are vanities or frauds. Their houses and their dress, as we have seen, are pitiful, their
special literature often worse than none,
their art the pictures on the hoardings, their amusements sensual. Their very holidays are miserable labor, dull excite-ments, almost wholly without physical or mental good or intellectual gain. A time of quiet relaxation or of natural enjoyment is indeed the lot of but few. Crowded excursion trains and the rude company
at seaside towns are the infliction of the lower, middle and the working classes,
and bank holidays are perhaps as much an injury as a blessing. Railways and steamboats and the means of entertainment are
so overcrowded that all healthy, civilized
enjoyment is impossible, and so the manners of the people become coarser from
the very means that should promote improvement.
On the continent each parish has its isolated fete, well managed and within the
means at hand, and thus these fetes are graceful, civilizing entertainments. We in London need such limited local relaxa-
tions, so that each part of the metropolis
being, as occasion may require, assisted by

NORMAL SCHOOL NOTES.

What Our Enterprising Correspondent has Learned For The Gazette's Busy Readers.

Subscribe for the Normal Pointer. Price, 50 cents per annum.

Guy Martin, of this city, has entered the Normal department.

The foot ball boys are trying to arrange a game with the Oshkosh Normal.

Miss Linton has been ill since last Friday and unable to meet her several classes at the Normal.

Regent J. O. Raymond's mountain lion took part in the living picture entertainment, last Saturday evening.

Pres. A. S. Salisbury, of the Whitewater Normal, spent the fore part of the week in visiting the several classrooms.

It may be interesting for our readers to know that the total receipts of the living picture entertainment amounted to $52.25: the total expenditure to $13.40, and the net receipts $38.85.

Mr. Rockwood, of Portage, secretary of the Board of Regents, addressed the school last Wednesday morning, giving an interesting and amusing speech on the headlong progress of the present age, without regard to the end that may be reached.

The meeting of the German literary society, last Friday, was well attended and proved a great success, a complete program being presented in German. The constitution, however, was read in English, but will be reproduced at the next meeting in German.

Last Saturday the second eleven defeated the Grand Rapids foot ball team with a score of 10 to 4. The game was well played and the boys returned home jubilant over their success, with their colors, blue and pink, waving from all sides. A return game will probably be played at Stevens Point this fall.

The Normal Press Association held a meeting, Tuesday evening, and adopted a constitution to govern their work. The paper, to be known as the Normal Pointer, will probably not be issued this month, but the Association hope to put it before the public in December. A committee consisting of Messrs. Clements, Hamilton and Everts, was appointed to decide on the size of the paper and see what bargains could be made in regard to the printing of it.

The following program will be presented at the next meeting of the Arena Literary society, Nov. 22d:

Song and Chorus, Misses Roberts, Fero, Pray and Kull; Messrs. Blencoe, Gardner, Thomas and Pray.

Quotations from Whittier. Quotations given by the gentlemen to begin with "M," and with "W" for the ladies.

Prof. Sylvester has a very interesting investigation in progress relative to the influence of school seats and desks upon the physical development of children. Photographs have been taken showing the deformities usually attributed to the school room and indisputably recording the actual physical condition of the child. In all cases the identity of the individual is concealed so that the most sensitive cannot object to the plan. In time the results of the investigation will be published, and from them ought to grow more sensible methods of seating and government. To insure the success of the experiment, it is necessary to make examinations of a very large number of children, and so boys over the age of ten years from any school in the city will be gladly examined and measured free of charge. If any wish it, a complete report with a chart showing the relative development of the child will be furnished upon payment of a very small sum, the cost of the card.

Bold, Bad Burglars.
When Fred. Stieler opened his grocery store at the corner of McCulloch and Reserve streets, last Saturday morning, the fact soon became apparent that one or more burglars had been in the building the night before, as one of the outside doors was found unbolts and several articles had suddenly turned up missing. In the rear of the store Mr. Stieler has a room for storing flour, feed, etc., from which there is an outside door facing Reserve street, and it is presumed the thief gained an entrance into this room early in the evening, before the door had been bolted with a wooden cross-bar used for that purpose. The thief evidently expected to find rolls of bills and bags of gold lying promiscuously around the building, but he was doomed to disappointment, as Fred. does not leave his wealth within such easy reach. The safe had been left unlocked, as usual, and the only thing disturbed therein was an iron chest about 11x6 inches, which was taken a short distance back of the store where it was found in the morning. Several insurance policies and other documents were also found near by, but a number of old coins which were in the chest, including a Mexican silver and copper dollar coined in 1727, are still missing. The only other articles Mr. Stieler has missed thus far are a box of cigars, several silk mufflers and a few silk and linen handkerchiefs. Fred. owned the Mexican piece fourteen years and had been offered $5.00 for it.

Novel Sale and Supper.
The young ladies of the Presbyterian church are preparing for what will be called a crepe paper sale, to be given in the Atwell building, on Main street, on afternoons and evenings of the 29th and 30th inst. Handsome lamp shades, artistic photo frames, pretty dolls and tasty boxes, all suitable for Christmas gifts, will be sold at figures that will prove satisfactory to the purchaser. There will also be a linen booth, to be presided over by a lady from Waukegan and who will bring a large assortment of art goods from that city and Sheboygan. The Japanese booth, however, promises to outrank all others in point of interest, and none can visit the building without seeing it. Supper will be served both evenings, and each evening the bill of fare will be different. Further announcement next week.

MARRIED.
HARRISON-SHERMAN.—At the home of the bride's parents, in the town of Blue Vista, Mr. Walter Harrison, of Plover, and Miss Jennie K. Sherman, Nov. 17, by the Rev. W. G. Cooper, of the M. E. church.

May their sail over life's voyage be pleasant and prosperous.

PROF. KING, of the Agricultural experiment Station, Madison, has another column in which he speaks of the lands throughout Northern Wisconsin that have been burned over, and the same should be read by all. It will be found on our second page.

DEMOCRATIC SENATORS are doing very little talking for publication concerning which party will control the Senate at the session of Congress, now only a little more than two weeks off. They have possession of the control of the committees and they propose to retain it until relieved of that duty by a majority of the Senate.

REPUBLICANS should curb their exuberant joy over the defeat of Calvin S. Brice for re-election as U. S. senator. Unless there should be more faithfulness, frauds and broken promises than usual in Ohio politics, Foraker will be Brice's successor. He will produce more discomfort among the republicans than Brice ever did.

It would be interesting to know whether any politics was talked when President Cleveland went to New York to attend the marriage of ex-Secretary Whitney's daughter. It was the first time the President and his ex-Secretary of the Navy had met for several years, and there was much they might have said to each other that would have interested democrats everywhere. No man in this country is a better judge of the trend of political sentiment than Wm. C. Whitney, and no man is better qualified to be a safe adviser of the administration.

MET THEIR WATERLOO.

The Stevens Point Normal Foot Ball Team are Defeated by Whitewater. Score 10 to 0.

Last Saturday the Stevens Point Normal eleven, weakened by the recent loss of its center and left half back, went down in a hotly contested game of foot ball, before the surplus brawn of the so-called Normal eleven of Whitewater. It is the first game the home team has lost this year, and while it must be considered a defeat, things would have gone in a very different manner could Gardner, whose left cheek bone was broken last week in practice, have filled his place at center. Never before has the team so fully realized what a strong and reliable center meant. In spite of the weakened condition of the home eleven the game was no walk-away and it is hoped that the Point team may in the near future meet the Whitewater Normal eleven on equal terms and reach a final conclusion as to which is the better team. In the game of Saturday, Whitewater played three men not belonging to the school: Aspinwall, a coach and professional; Kelly and Worthington, of the Whitewater High School, one a professor, the other the High School center; and possibly when she has to limit her team to the Whitewater Normal affairs will appear in a different light.

The game was called at 3 p. m., and as the players took their positions in the field it was seen that the Whitewater men were much heavier than their opponents and it was hoped by many sympathetic spectators, that none of those men would happen to fall on the Point boys, as the result might be discouraging. At the beginning of the first half Blencoe kicked off and Whitewater was soon downed, but managed by a series of line smashes to get the ball dangerously near the Point goal line. Here Blencoe, who had become desperate, threw himself under the Whitewater interference for the purpose of breaking it up and when he came to the surface, Lean of Whitewater had the oval under his arm and was stepping in a most rapid manner for the Point goal line. Blencoe sprinted after him, but too late, for Lean had crossed the line and Stevens Point had for the first time been scored against. Sweet failed at goal. Score: Whitewater 4, Stevens Point 0.

Stevens Point again kicked off and after three downs the referee decided that it would be a great plan for the Point eleven to handle the pigskin, and it was given up accordingly, only to be returned in the most polite manner after three consecutive downs.

Again those center smashes, but in her hurry Whitewater fumbled and Johnson pounced upon the ball as though he was glad there was one thing in the field small enough to hold. Blencoe then took the oval and by dodging and sprinting gained 35 yards, but the ball was soon lost to Whitewater in downs and time was called for the first half.

At the beginning of the second half Sweet kicked to Bruemmer, who falling upon the ball acted as a foundation for most of the Whitewater team, but finally managed to assume his natural position. The Point now made several small gains, but soon lost the ball on downs and Lean of Whitewater again did the quick-step act, crossing the goal line. He was not grunted the touch down, however, as Aspinwall and Harris had considered it necessary to hold Blencoe rather than let him fall on Lean; so Stevens Point was given the ball on the twenty-five yard line. Whitewater soon regained the ball and again resuming her old tactics of line bucking carried the Point to within 5 yards of the goal, where the home center very politely allowed the visitors another touch down. Sweet kicked goal. Score: Whitewater 10, Stevens Point 0. Stevens Point again kicked off and Riedelbach's fine sprint, coupled with line smashes, brought the pigskin to within 25 yards of Point goal line when time was called and the game was at an end. Score: Whitewater 10, Stevens Point 0.

The line up was as follows:

STEVENS POINT.....WHITewater Johnson.....left end.....Sweet, W. E. Lean.....left tackle.....Aspinwall Paral.....left guard.....Miller Barker.....center.....Miller Bruemmer.....right guard.....Worthington Marz.....right tackle.....Riedelbach Thomas.....right end.....Carners Everts.....quarter.....Harris Blencoe.....right half.....Lean Weaver.....left half.....Burrows Hamilton.....full back.....Sweet Subs.—Stevens Point: J. Clark, Perry; Whitewater: P. Smith, Athens, Welch. Length of halves—25 minutes. Referee (Grant): Umphre McDougall; Linesman—Campbell.

No slugging took place during the game, although tongue lashings and foul tackling were quite frequent. It was a clean game and one that shows the Point can play foot ball in the face of defeat as well as victory. Blencoe and Johnson played a specially brilliant game, tackling and breaking up interference. Paral and Bruemmer did good work in the line, but were weakened by the absence of Gardner. The visitors played good foot ball and should have credit accordingly. Their work showed confidence in their captain. Sweet, and hard, steady training. Lean and Riedelbach specially distinguished themselves in advances and tackling. Aspinwall played a good professional game.

PANIC AT A FIRE.

LOSS OF LIFE NARROWLY AVERTED AT BOSTON.

Blaze Starts in a Distillery Warehouse and Results in a Loss of $145,000—Manufacturing Company's Plant at Crete, Ill., Burned.

At Boston, Mass., a fire which started in the five-story brick building, 200-202 Congress street, occupied by the Empire Distilling company, Thursday caused a loss of $125,000—$50,000 on the building and $75,000 on contents. There is an insurance of about $60,000 on the latter. There were about thirty employees in the building when the fire broke out, but all of them escaped. The Lowmyer Chocolate company's store is next to the burned building. Over 400 girls were in the dining rooms there when the flames burst from the windows of the burning structure. A panic ensued and the girls joined in a wild rush for the doors. In the scramble several girls fainted, and, falling, were trodden upon. Miss Alice Fay sustained a broken arm by falling down stairs. The fire department by arduous efforts kept the flames confined to the building in which they originated. James Connolly, a cooper for the distilling company, was burned about the face and neck, and Lieut. Fox, of engine 25, was caught by falling glass. Joseph Bradley also sustained a fracture of the right ankle. The damage to property adjacent to the distilling company will amount to about $20,000.

AN IOWA SCANDAL.

Traffic in Lunatics Alleged to Have Been Carried On.

Des Moines, Iowa, Nov. 15.—The State Executive Council has discovered what promises to develop into one of the biggest scandals ever known in state official circles. Under the state laws, insane patients whose own resources will not pay for their support in the state hospitals must be cared for by the counties from which they are sent, provided they have a residence there. Patients who have no residence are cared for at the state's expense. At present there are 140 state patients in the Independence asylum, 100 at Mount Pleasant, and almost as many at Clarinda. For a long time it has been a matter of wonderment with the state officials that there should be so many state patients. The charge per patient is $14 per month, besides fees for transportation. A few days ago a bill was presented by Scott county for fees for taking state patients to the hospital. It has been investigated, and yesterday the Executive Council refused to allow it. The investigation developed that insane patients from the counties in Illinois adjoining Scott county have been sent over to Scott by the Illinois officials and taken to the state institutions as state patients by the Scott officials. It would always be explained that it had been impossible to learn what their real residence was. The Council has been convinced itself that this has been going on, systematically, for a long time. It also learned that there had been similar cases from Woodbury county, and, in fact, from most of the counties which border on the state line. The officers in the counties receive 6 cents per mile for transportation and 40 cents per hour

IS NOW BISHOP WILLIAMS.

Selected to Preside Over the Diocese of Northern Michigan.

Marquette, Mich., Nov. 15.—The primary convention of the new Episcopal diocese, erected out of the missionary jurisdiction of Northern Michigan, called to meet here yesterday to organize the diocese and elect a bishop, completed its work in one day's session and adjourned to meet in regular session the first Wednesday after the first Sunday in May of each year. By a vote of 24 out of 38 cast, the venerable archdeacon, G. Mott Williams, of Marquette, was chosen bishop on the second informal ballot. The name Marquette was chosen as the official designation of the new diocese, in deference to the recommendation of the house of bishops in general convention at Minneapolis, through a strong party favored the name "Superior." The choice of name and of bishop virtually fixes the city of Marquette as the cathedral city and St. Paul's church as the bishop's cathedral. The same constitution and canons governing the diocese of Michigan, with a few verbal changes, were adopted. The field comprises the entire northern peninsula of Michigan, having an area of 16,510 square miles and a population of 206,000 souls, of whom upward of 2,500 profess the Episcopal faith. The clergy consists, at present, of eleven priests and three divinity students. There are six vacancies, including the one at Sault Ste. Marie, which was due to the election of the rector to the new bishopric of Alaska.

Bishop-Elect Williams cannot be consecrated until his election has been confirmed by the majority of all the other bishops. As that cannot take place before the end of January, 1896, the diocese will, in the meantime, be administered by a standing committee.

WANTS BIMETALLISTS' VOTES. Senator Harris Addresses a Letter to His Colleagues.

Washington, Nov. 15.—Senator Harris, the chairman of the executive committee of six appointed at the Washington conference of last August to organize for the campaign of 1896 the free silver Democrats of the country, has sent letters to his colleagues, the chief feature of which is the following: "In the light of recent election results, there is, in my opinion, no hope of Democratic success in 1896 unless we can succeed in so organizing the bimetallic Democrats as to secure in the national convention a plain, distinct, and unmistakable declaration in favor of the free and unlimited coinage of both silver and gold, without regard to the financial policies of any country. Therefore, it appears to me that we should redouble our efforts to secure such organization."

Senator Harris' colleagues are Senator Jones of Arkansas, Senator Turpie of Indiana, Governor Stone of Missouri, William H. Hinrichsen of Illinois, and Casey Young of Tennessee.

At Asbury Park last night huge waves pounded the board walks and the bluff with tremendous force. At Ocean Grove from thirty-five to forty feet of the bluff has been carried away. At Cape May much damage has been done to the beaches. LOSES MANY ACRES.

Secretary Smith Makes an Important Decision.

Washington, Nov. 15.—Secretary Smith has decided that the eastern terminus of the Northern Pacific railroad is at either Thomson, Minn., or Superior, Wis., instead of Ashland, Wis., as has always been claimed by the company. About eight hundred thousand acres of land is involved, which is lost by the company. The secretary does not undertake to say whether the grant begins at Thomson or Superior, but directs all selections for indemnity between these points to be held for further consideration. He does declare that the grant of the Northern Pacific does not extend east of Superior City.

He also says that he is aware that the lands east of Superior were the basis for the selection of a large quantity of lands from the indemnity belt of the company's grant in North Dakota. These selections having been made some time ago, many, if not all, have perhaps been sold by the company. The secretary has directed that the company be allowed sixty days within which to specify a new basis for any of its indemnity selections voided by this decision.

Surprised His Friends.

A PROMINENT ILLINOIS MAN HAS A REMARKABLE EXPERIENCE.

The Story of the Wonderful Change in Mr. Shepherd's Condition.

From the Pantograph, Bloomington, Ill.
Mr. A. A. Shepherd, a prominent and respected citizen of Lytleville, McLean County, Illinois, was taken down with rheumatism about five years ago. He suffered with terrible pains in his hips and at times, when he was able to walk, would fall down when taken with the severe pains. He also had very severe pains in the region of his heart and at times thought he surely would die. He tried a number of good physicians but could get no permanent relief. At times he was down in bed and could not turn himself without help. Was not able to work any to amount to anything for five years or more. But now his neighbors and friends are surprised to see him stout and hearty and able to work. In fact he has worked all the present season and worked hard and feels well. He has a number of men at work in the woods this summer getting out cooper material and he has not only overseen their work but has worked with them all the time. Some time last fall while he was suffering from his rheumatism he began to improve and a wonderful cure of a case of rheumatism by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and while in Heyworth one day he stepped into the drug store of Mr. F. H. Hill and purchased two boxes of the pills. After he commenced taking them the pains left his limbs and he began to improve at once. He can cheerfully recommend them to any one afflicted as he was. Mr. Hill, the druggist, said:

"I have several customers using the Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People for the relief and cure of rheumatism, among whom is A. A. Shepherd, whose case has been one of unusual interest, and Pink Pills have surely effected a wonderful change in his condition." F. H. Hill, Druggist.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are sold in boxes at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $3.50, and may be had of all druggists or directly by mail from Dr. Williams' Med. Co., Shenectady, N. Y.

A Tontine Hotel.
The ancient Tontine hotel of New Haven, built in 1824 by a company organized under the tontine plan, is now owned by forty-four "nominees" holding fifty-one shares of stock. The company started with 117 stockholders, and the number was increased to 243. Under the original agreement, when only seven stockholders are left the property becomes theirs. The original capital was $24,300; it was intended to start with a capitalization of $30,000, but the company was not successful in reaching that amount. As most of the surviving shareholders are aged people, it will be only a few years before the number, seven, will have been reached, and then they will take the property absolutely and the company will go out of existence. So far as is known, this is the only company of this character in this country, one which existed in New York having gone out of existence several years ago.

Home Seekers' Excursion.

An Experience With Quicksand.
Josh Skains, a negro, went down into a well to clean it out. As soon as he put his feet on the bottom quicksands closed around them, and he could not move an inch. He told those at the top that he was fastened in sucking sand, and for them to pull him up. They pulled and pulled, but could not move the man. The suction was so great that try as they would they could not move him. For forty-eight hours he remained at the bottom of the well, and all the time those above were doing their best to pull him out. He had been pulled at with rope and windlass until his joints were so sore that this had to be abandoned. Finally a box was sunk around him and the sand and mud were dipped out of the box. After several hours the man was released more dead than alive.—Atlanta Constitution.

The Tramp's Revenge.
Housekeeper—Here, you! just you leave, or I'll set the dog—Tramp—Please, mum—
"Get out, I say."
"Yes, mum, I'll go if you want me to. I only dropped in to tell ye of a new and sure cure for freckles and red hair, mum. Good-day, mum."

Historical.
"Are all the animals in?" asked Noah, taking another look at the barometer.
"All but the leopards," replied Ham, "and I think we have a pair of them spotted."

Too Suggestive.
"Yes," said the young physician of aristocratic lineage, "our family has a motto, but I prefer not to use it. It is a little too suggestive in my profession."

"What is it?"
"Faithful unto death."

I told it truth with him who sings to one clear harp in diverse times, That men may rise on stepping-stones of their dead selves to higher things.

LEGENDS OF AZTECS.

HOW THEY ARE UTILIZED IN THE PRESENT DAY.

The Celebrations at Guadalupe, Mexico, in Which the Indians So Freely Join—Strange Story of an Indian's Alleged Miraculous Picture.

Special Correspondence.
SEVERAL American archbishops will be distinguished visitors during the ceremonies attending the reopening of the Shrine of Guadalupe in Mexico. The ceremony practically began on Oct 1 and will continue for three months. This event far exceeds the notable pilgrimage of Sacro Monte, which occurred in August, 1892, when the worshippers came from all parts of the republic. The six archbishops of Mexico were present and a vast concourse of people, a large number of whom were Indians. The event was unique in view of the religious enthusiasm manifested. The Church Guadalupe is the holiest shrine in Mexico, and contains the picture of a woman of Aztec, the legend of which nearly four centuries ago was the occasion of an event that has ever since had its effect upon the life of the people.

This church is built upon the spot where an Aztec divinity named Tonanzin (Mother of the Gods) received homage before Mexican cities arose or the Aztec chiefs were made by Cortez the slaves of Spain. The miracle, whose chief instrumentality was an Indian, was the means of converting the Aztecs from pagan worship to that of Christianity, and the Church is the fifth edifice that has been erected.

The legend of the Virgin of Guadalupe is one of the most impressive and beautiful in history. It enters into the life of the Mexican people quite as much as does that of Joan of Arc in France. When Don Miguel Hidalgo had rushed forth to shake Mexico from the power of Spain it was a painting of the Virgin of Guadalupe that was inscribed upon his banners and her name was the watchword of the insurrectionary party. "Long live our Mother, most holy Guadalupe! Long live America, and death to bad government!" was then the declaration of Mexican independence, and is still the text of the president of the republic on the Mexican Fourth of July. These words he utters at 11 o'clock on every 15th of September, the anniversary of the very hour when Hidalgo uttered them in 1810. The Emperor Iturbide made the Order of Guadalupe the highest dignity in his court and when he was executed the first act of the republican congress in 1824 was to constitute the Virgin's day a national holiday.

The Virgin of Guadalupe is thus, besides patron saint of Mexico, a concrete divinity as significant in a political as she is held sacred in a religious sense, and it is the manifestation of strong feelings developed at the opening of the magnificent church in her honor at a time when the president and the Vatican authorities are at right angles over the appointment of an apostolic delegate to Mexico and the establishment of diplomatic relations, that has aroused so much interest and anxiety in the present ceremonial, which is partly religious and partly political in character.

On the spot where the Virgin's church stands the Indian chiefs of Mexico have for many centuries assembled to be cured, to renew their allegiance to Tonanzin, to crown new chiefs or to depose others, to hold councils of war, and perform those rites and ceremonies which their forefathers with little variation performed in the days of the "Mother of the Gods," and which they hold are as old as the mountains of their native Mexico.

The tradition runs that one day an Indian, in going up the side of a hill to consult the doctors of Tonanzin about a sick uncle, saw a phenomenal atmospheric disturbance and heard the voices of a choir of angels singing. While gazing in wonder and amazement a beautiful lady was evolved out of the clouds, who told him she was the Mother of the Gods and who commanded the Indian to go and see the bishop and advise him to build her a church upon that sacred spot. The Indian returned to the bishop and told him what he saw and heard, but the bishop dismissed the Indian as a dreamer and a fool, whereupon the Indian again repaired to the spot and told the beautiful lady. Upon hearing what he said, the lady angrily stamped her right foot upon the earth, and the consequent explosion made by her heel there sprang forth a stream of brackish water; she bade the Indian go again to the bishop and at the same time told him to make his mind easy about his uncle's sickness, and from that hour he was cured. The Indian returned to the bishop as requested, who again heard the strange story, but this time requested that some token should be brought to him of these things, and at the same time dispatched two of his servants to watch the man's movements. The Indian, however, when he came to the holy hill, disappeared from the watchers somehow, contrary to the instructions of the bishop, and when he reappeared to them he claimed to have held conference with the lady, who now commanded him to gather flowers from the barren rock upon which he stood and take them to the bishop as proof of her supernatural power. When the Indian came again to the bishop he delivered the flowers and while doing so a beautiful picture of the lady herself was revealed amid a flash of light upon the tibia, or cloak, of the Indian, at the sight of which the bishop himself fell upon his knees, placed the miraculous picture in his oratory and proceeded forthwith to erect the church, of which the Indian became the sexton. Upon examination of the Indian's uncle it was discovered that he was providentially cured at the very time the Virgin said such would be the case.

The fame of these incidents spread all over Mexico and the worship of the pagan "Mother of Gods" was transferred into worship of the Christ-mother, the affections of the Indians being thus easily transferred from one divinity to another without much changing of the scenes, or of the necessary forms and rites. It is on this account that the present immense gathering of Indians, who constitute, roughly speaking, half the population, has so much significance.

The tibia of the Indian, whose name was Juan Diego, was exhibited upon the altar during the solemn festival and had remarkable effect upon those assembled. Within the tabernacle, and in a frame of gold and silver inclosed with plate glass, the alleged miraculous image is still preserved. The material upon which the picture is wrought is of coarse texture, the figure itself being somewhat conventional in type, good in point of artistic effect, and though 350 years old, it is said, still retains its original freshness and strength of outline. An examination of the garment plainly reveals its material.

The Church of Guadalupe in its interior is remarkable for its magnificent embellishments, being richly furnished in white and gold. The railings are made of silver, there being no fewer than thirty-six tons of silver and gold used in ornamentation of the high altar, which is made from designs of To'sa, the famous sculptor of the monument to the Emperor Iturbide. It cost $1,181,000, and the value of jewels, of gold and silver and of other rich belongings which had accumulated, reached $2,000,000, in addition, when the government confiscated the property of the religious orders, at the time of the reformation in Mexico.

Over the spring of brackish water caused by the heel of the Mother of Gods has been erected a little chapel termed the Chapel of the Little Well. There is a stone staircase leading up to the summit on which the chapel stands, and which is erected on the identical spot where the Indian is said to have gathered the flowers that convinced the doubting bishop, the church proper standing where a thousand years ago native Indians worshipped Tonanzin or made merry by feasting on autumn fruits and singing the praises of their pagan gods.

AS IN A STORY BOOK.

All Common Sailors Are Not Common Men by Any Means.

The anecdote Richard Harding Davis has written about the man of good family who shipped aboard a man-of-war as a common "Jackie" and went off to offer the surgeon letters of introduction to swell San Francisco clubs, reminds one with startling force of the varied life aboard one of our big cruisers. They are, in fact, small villages in themselves, but show more than a village's range of station.
Take the New York, for instance. There are between five and six hundred men aboard her. The officers, by the system of appointment to the naval academy, come from every quarter of the United States. Some were from inland towns and had never seen any extensive sheet of water before. They represent every class of society and every taste and type thrown together day after day, but utterly cut off from the hundreds of other men whose origin may have differed little from theirs, but whose life is so utterly dissimilar.
There is no doubt that the case Mr. Davis mentions is not without parallel. Indeed, rumor has it that aboard that very cruiser New York is a young man who gives his city address as the Century club and whose family name is neither unknown or unhonored.—Ex.

FIVE BICYCLES! FIFTY DOLLARS IN GOLD! A Puzzle for the Evening Fireside.

The publishers of THE AMERICAN HARVEST HOME, the leading farm and home paper, in order to introduce their publication to thousands of homes where it is not read, have devised a unique puzzle. It ought to arouse the interest of everybody, and we think it will. Between now and Xmas we want to send 5000 to our list, and we mean to do it. It may cost a good deal for advertising, but we shall be repaid in the long run, because when our paper becomes a visitor to a home, it generally means a permanent subscription. The faces shown above are those of eight Heroes of the Civil War. Our artist has drawn them correctly and has then divided each face into three sections, and has mixed things up generally. Now the puzzle consists in cutting and fitting the proper sections together so as to form the eight portraits and then naming each one correctly, in accordance with the rules. "Nothing hard about that?" All right, try it! Each of the five persons sending the best answers will receive a HIGH GRADE BICYCLE, and the twenty-five next best will each receive a TWO DOLLAR subscription. MAHONE AND THE BISCUIT.

Punishment of a Negro Cook Who Did His Baking Badly During the War.
"I remember," said a former surgeon in the confederate army, "General Mahone as he appeared before Petersburg in 1864 and 1865. He was already famous throughout the army for his fighting qualities, for his peppery temper, and for his keen eccentricities.
"My duty as surgeon took me frequently past his headquarters, and one morning I saw Mahone pacing solemnly up and down in front of his tent, while a negro man sat in the doorway gorging himself with fresh-baked biscuit. I turned to an officer, who was looking on at some little distance, and asked the meaning of the strange performance at Mahone's tent. Then came the explanation that the negro had baked a pan of sour and heavy biscuits for breakfast, and Mahone, by way of an object lesson, had set the cook down to eat all of his own product. The negro ate away as fast as possible, and Mahone kept up his patrol until the last biscuit had disappeared. The performance was characteristic of the eccentric but determined little man who hit upon this strange method of punishment."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally, in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer One Hundred Dollars for any case it fails to cure, and send circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. ARE LIKED IN LONDON

SOME MUSIC HALL FAVORITES OF NEW BABYLON.

Letty Lind the Idol of the Theatre. Gertrude Hamer is a Beauty Devoid of Talents—Clay Loftus, May Yohe and Others.

BE a favorite on the stage in the "Modern Babylon," a woman must be equipped in at least one of three ways. She may be only beautiful, and the lack of talent will be overlooked; if she starts by her "fetching" qualities, audacity, diablerie, she may be plain and sublimely stupid; or she must legitimately amuse and interest according to English canons, which, by the way, are frequently not ours. Two of these types are found in "The Artist's Model," the comic opera which has held a London stage now for very nearly a year—Letty Lind and Hetty Hamer.

We are familiar with the dainty little Englishwoman who transformed skirt-dancing into a sort of butterfly art four or five years ago. London pets her. In the blue jean trousers and blouse of the Paris street urchin, as she dances in her diminutive clogs and smiles in her odd, one-sided way, she sparkles into the sympathy of the watchers. Her face is piquant—an honest, little face—but of absolute beauty she has scarcely any, and after three years' illness she returned to the stage last year with only an echo of a voice, even for spoken lines. Her charm, however, does not depend on beauty of face or voice. She seems a spry, her every glance an unreserved expression of the part she plays; her smile flashing over every part of a crowded house an invisible lasso knitting the attention and homage of her audience. And then, lastly, and most important, these little feet of hers! In the turnings of the "Tom-It" dance they waft the blues away as gracefully as clouds of tobacco smoke; acrobatic sky assaults find no exponent in Letty Lind. She is a born comedienne. Seldom does a dancing member of a comic-opera company give any semblance of reality to the lines of the libretto—as a rule it is considered quite enough to strut through the part; but as the runaway school-girl in Paris, playing truant in the blouse and cap of a saucy gamin, she is satisfying enough to dispense with songs and dances and still be a success.

In contrast to her stands Hetty Hamer. Her photographs decorate the theater lobbies as prominently as those of the principals, yet she does nothing. She is as an actress as she might be a model in a cloak shop. Her face is beautiful, though lacking in shades of expression. She neither sings nor acts. She merely exists behind the foot-lights and draws her large salary because her eyes are like big, shadowed violets, her mouth like a Greek bow, the cut of her nose and chin strikingly classic. She suggests Hardy's milkmaid heroine, Tess—the bovine calm in the large, clear eyes, the pouting lips, with the red pinch in the middle of the upper one, the surprised, ingenuous, unvarying smile. Lengthy notices are always given Hetty Hamer in the papers, and the interest the audience takes in her is eloquent of another national difference between the English and us—their critical appreciation of feminine beauty, merely as beauty, irrespective of talent and social status.

Another instance of this under more unreserved conditions is the beautiful Miss Harold, of the music halls. She is five feet five, of physical perfection, and renders racy songs in a diminutive voice and with a lisp but she has a face of the retrograde cherub order which a smile awakens into dimples. London is content to look at her in three changes of Psyche-like costume every evening, forget the lip, and applaud.

Cissy Loftus, the mimic—all London is talking of her. She is considered as genuinely talented for the work she does, as Letty Lind for hers. Her vogue in New York was mild, perhaps because she did not mimic types familiar to us. Be that as it may, she is a reigning queen of her world, and stands alone in her special line of work in London. Her pictures are everywhere, and many of them, from the aristocratic tea-rooms in the neighborhood of Hyde Park, to the grimy windows of the fried-fish shops near Drury Lane, and the great Palace Theater, crowded from foot-lights to dome as the time approaches when she is due to appear, presents an almost terrifying spectacle when viewed from an upper box. She is considered an inimitable mimic. The celebrities she holds up for amusement must of course be as familiar as one's hand to be enjoyed. Her selections for the English have been from the beginning happy ones.

As an American making a "hit" in London never approached in her native land, May Yohe stands out prominently. She has a pretty, irregular, characterless face—no one calls her a beauty—and her hoarse, uncultivated contralto wins no soft adjectives when an Englishman describes it. But she is nevertheless an unqualified success, the star of a burlesque opera company, very much photographed, very much talked of, and if, as some one has said, it is the ambition of a variety actress to see her name on the back of a "sandwich man" crawling among the crowds, then May Yohe must revel in a theatrical Nirvana every time she drives out.

One feels inclined to try and diagnose the reasons for her English triumphs. As you watch her stride across the stage, invariably in boy's clothes, almost invariably cracking a whip or smoking a cigarette, throwing in a surreptitious wink at the audience between a hoarse laugh and a hoarse line, you feel the magnetism of her audacity. The thought that you are regarding a woman with probably no iota of reverence for anything under heaven but her own wayward will, a compilation of boyish sauciness, recklessness, with fingers poised to snap defiance at criticism, has a certain charm which deepens as the play progresses, writes Kate Jordan, in Leslie's Weekly. Part of her success may also be due to the fact that she has achieved one of those strange alliances for which London is famous—the lord and the burlesque actress. May Yohe under the limelight—Lady Hope

CISSY LOFTUS.

In private life, the possessor of a penniless, titled husband—the one is scarcely less audaciously interesting than the other. Lastly, she is an American, has the American accent and go-ahead manner. Slow-going, conservative British subjects, like these. The charm of unexpectedness hangs over May Yohe—a tacit promise of never-ending surprises flavored with sauce piquante.

After a season in London, one fact touching on this subject stands out prominently: Londoners are faithful to their favorites, and its never occurs to them to wonder how they might please other communities. With hope high the popular ones may leave their familiar haunts to conquer other lands; they may return, as they sometimes do, unsuccessful, homesick, suffering from the pangs of chagrin—but unchanged, clamorous London draws them back to its big heart again, and the memory of failure is forgotten like a bad dream.

Sixty Years Old.

The 90th birthday of Mrs. Mary Ann Keeley will soon be celebrated at the Lyceum Theater, in London, and the event promises to be one of unusual interest, for the aged actress will then appear in one of the parts in which she won celebrity years ago. Mrs. Keeley is the oldest living British actress, as Mr. Howe, who is now in the United States with Sir Henry Irving's company, is the oldest actor. One of the prominent traits of their great age is their extreme helplessness of demeanor.

John Morrill, the veteran player, is quoted as saying that at least eight changes are necessary to make the Boston team pennant winners for next season. Should the club official take Morrill's advice several of the men can find places with the local team.

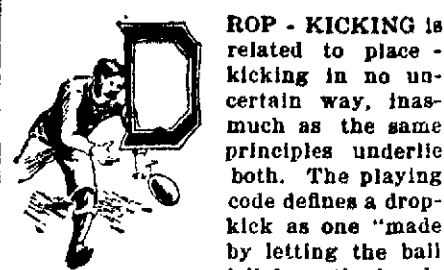

J. C. Vernon, late of the Empiric Theater company, has joined Sanders and Hathaway's Comedy company. Harry and Marie Weeks are to go with the company, and Matthew Cavanaugh has been engaged as stage carpenter.

It is now believed that W. H. Watkins will manage the Toledo club should the Swamp City be readmitted to the Western League.

ON DROP KICKING.

A GOOD TRICK IN THE GAME OF FOOTBALL.

"Bailing" the Pig Skin at the Very Instant It Touches the Ground—Some Figures Illustrative of the Same—The Place-Kick.

ROP - KICKING is related to place-kicking in no uncertain way, inasmuch as the same principles underlie both. The playing code defines a drop-kick as one "made by letting the ball fall from the hands and kicking it at the very instant it rises." It would be more exact to say, kicking it at the very moment it touches the ground. This is a distinction with a difference, which is hardly appreciable when time alone is considered, but of consequence to a proper application of force. That is to say, if your foot meets the ball the moment the ball strikes the ground the force you put into the kick counts for more than if you caught the ball after it had left the ground; and the farther the ball gets away, the less benefit can be derived from the contact and consequent rebound from Mother Earth.

As I have said, the drop-kick is related in no uncertain way to place-

kicking. The difference—nominal entirely—is that the drop-kicker takes the place of the holder of the ball for a place-kick, arranging the ball with his own hands. Once out of his hands the ball seeks the earth, strikes in the exact position it would have been placed in for a place-kick and kicked accordingly.

But whereas the place-kick is always accomplished in detail the same, drop-kicking, owing to varying conditions, embraces a number of different ways of handling the ball upon its receipt from the quarter-back. If a drop-kicker were always allowed the time he wanted to accomplish a kick he would perform the same always. In reality, however, as the drop-kick is used for the most part from a down in an attempt to score a goal from the field, opponents greatly hurry the kicker in their attempts to block the ball.

Let us now imagine a case wherein the drop may be employed, and follow in detail the several movements of the kicker.

Team "A" having forced team "B" to the latter's twenty-yard line directly in front of the goal, decide upon a try for a goal from the field. Inasmuch as there are but two minutes more to play during this, the second half, and the score is a tie, a goal means certain victory. On the other hand, a touchdown is quite impossible in the short time left to play.

So the signal is given, and the full-back of team "A" drops back to the thirty-yard line, or ten yards back of his own line. As he does so he fixes definitely in his mind's eye the exact location of the goal and thereafter his eyes become glued to the ball, at the time under the hand of the snap-back.

When the ball is snapped the eyes follow it into the quarter's hands, and with cat-like vigilance note its flight into his very arms—or hands, as in Figure 1 (had the ball been passed into the left side the left arm would have encircled it while the right hand would have been clapped over the top), then as the ball falls to the ground the eyes center upon that charmed spot "X"—that is, a point midway between the lower end of the lacing and the bottom end of the ball. When the foot meets the ball the eyes may be raised, not before.

Now, the movement directly following the catch of the pass, as in Figure 1, is a short step forward of the left foot, followed the same moment by an instantaneous throwing out of the arms at full length and in a downward direction—say an angle of forty-five degrees with the earth. (See Figure 2.) At the same time the body bends a bit forward at the hips, the right foot advancing to plant itself firmly. From the moment the ball is caught till the arms are straightened it is firmly clasped by the hands in the unaltered position in which they have caught the ball.

The planting of the right foot signals the release of the ball. I emphasize "release," to call particular attention to the point that the hands are drawn away from the ball; that is to say, there is no spasmodic movement which implies that they toss the ball away. Most drop-kickers toss the ball, and thus lay themselves open to the evil of a ball not under control, for the moment they toss it the ball falls badly, and eventually strikes the earth in any but the right way.

In Figure 2 the hands can almost be seen to move as they release the ball with a movement similar to pulling out the two parts of an accordion, and the ball shows a position similar to that which it later assumes in Figure 3.

Now, as the right foot takes its stand, the left reaches its hindmost limit of swing, and without a moment's pause comes swinging forward in a line which, if carried out, would pass by the side of the right foot—under the body—cut the ball in two, bisecting its middle seam, and continuing on, fetch up against the middle of the cross-bar.

Another position gives a front view just after the ball has left the foot on its way to the goal. The blur which the foot makes shows that it is still in motion upward, proving that there has been no awkward, snappy kick. Instead, simply an easy, sweeping movement of almost uniform force from start to near the finish.

Still another figure which depicts Charley Brewer, of Harvard, making a drop-kick, is highly interesting from the fact that it shows a plain violation of the rule of keeping the eye on the ball, and not on the goal sought for. While Brewer has been successful in a way with his drop-kicks, he has never made any record of note. Perhaps it is this one defect—a most serious one—which has hitherto kept him back.

I have said that a kicker should from the very snap of the ball keep his eye alone on the ball. It seems advisable to qualify this statement in this way: Suppose the center-rush is bothered in snapping, and in this particular case the quarter gets the ball poorly, and the fact communicates itself to you instantly that a poor and slow pass is likely to follow. In such a case it is the part of discretion—particularly if you know your opponents to be quick line-breakers—to take a sharp glance about after you have the ball securely in your hands. On the instant, you may see the chance to kick unmolested and kick, or you may see opponents about to leap upon you in time to run quickly to one side, then kick. If a chance presents itself for a run, do that by all means.

On paper this all seems pretty complicated and impossible on the field of play. On the other hand, it is far from impossible if one has a cool head to act on the instant in accordance with what seems best. And in such cases a cool man, having to make up his mind like lightning, does so, and does so correctly; at any rate, he never makes a complete fizzle of the situation.

SPORTING NOTES.

During a football match between teams representing Reading High school and Pottsville, played at Pottsville, Pa., Full Back Howard Lewis, of Reading, was kicked in the head during the first half of the contest, but pluckily resumed his place on the eleven. In the second half of the game he was injured internally, and was removed from the field in an unconscious condition.

Dan McLeod defeated J. C. Comstock in a Lancashire wrestling match, best two falls in three, at Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 11. He gained two falls in quick succession.

Amos Moore, of Webster, in a bowling match between teams representing Putnam and Webster, Mass., at the former place, Oct. 10, is stated to have made 710 pins in three strings.

Defender's crew were given a reception and dinner at Northwest Harbor, Deer Island, Me. Five hundred guests were seated at the banquet, and appropriate speech was made by Hon. E. P. Spofford, and letters from Capt. Hank Hall and others were read.

The Palisade Boat club, at Yonkers, N. Y., has made formal complaint with the Potomac Amateur Rowing association against the Montrose Boat club, of Philadelphia, Pa. They allege that the Montrose crew intentionally fouled the Palisade crew in the Potomac river regatta on Aug. 24.

Joe Nuttall, the professional swimmer, swam 250 yards at the Stanley-Bridge Baths, Eng., in 2m. 57.3-10s., making a new record.

At Denver, Harry Clarke, a Class A rider, rode two miles unpaired in 4.30 1-5, beating the Class A record twenty seconds and the Class B record eleven seconds. Clarke's record is official, as a sanction had been granted for the trial.

FLEETS ARE MOVING.

NAVAL FORCE PREPARED TO COERCE TURKEY.

Squadrons of Different Nations Are Assembling Ready to Move in the Dardanelles at the Bidding of Their Governments.

Constantinople, Nov. 15.—The Italian fleet is understood to be on its way to Salonica bay to join the British fleet of about twenty warships already there. The French fleet is expected there shortly, and the representatives of the powers, as a result of communications exchanged with their governments, have had another informal meeting at the French embassy. When the three squadrons have united and Sir Philip Currie, the British ambassador, returns, some decided step upon the part of the powers may be anticipated.

News received here from the district of Van records fresh massacres of Armenian Christians there. The Kurds of Van are said to be attacking and pillaging the Armenian villages and the Turkish officials are reported to be powerless to preserve order. A telegram received here from Sivas on Tuesday evening, says that a massacre of the Armenians has been commenced in that city; but according to the porte order has been restored there. The facts in the case may be expected shortly.

Every day brings further details of the massacres at Erzeroum, and each report makes the story of the crimes there more ghastly. Men, women and children were shot, bayoneted, burned and assaulted for days, the killing and mutilation lasting for weeks, though intervals of rest are recorded. The orders for these outrages are said to have been sent by the porte and they were carried out in the most cruel manner imaginable. The number of killed will probably never be known, but it is estimated at from 500 to 2,000, according to Turkish or Armenian versions of the affair. Certainly many hundreds were killed, and it is even said that some of the victims were skinned alive, while others were soaked with petroleum and set fire to.

The Turks of Erzeroum as usual claim that the Armenians were the aggressors; but independent reports acquit the Armenians of doing anything more than attempting to defend themselves at Erzeroum and at Diarbekir, although at Zeitoun, where they captured a Turkish battalion, and at Marash, the Armenians are admitted to have taken the initiative in attacking the Turks. The latter are not always to blame for the outbreaks, but there seems to be no excuse for the fiendish massacres which follow. When once the Turk begins killing he never knows when to stop.

ALL WANT THE CONVENTION.

Secretary Sheerin, of the National Democratic Committee, Talks.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 15.—S. P. Sheerin, secretary of the Democratic national committee, said yesterday that he will issue a call for a meeting of the committee early in December. He does not believe anyone can forestall with any degree of certainty where the next convention will be held. "The members of the committee have not been consulting by letter as they usually do," said he. "My correspondence with cities that are after the convention is getting very heavy. San Francisco, St. Louis, Buffalo and Pittsburgh are working industriously for the convention. New York also wants it. Some time ago it was understood that Chicago would not ask for either convention, but I see that city is now asking for both of them. The convention is worth a great deal in a financial way to the city that gets it. I would say that a national convention is worth not less than $2,000,000 to the city in which it is held. I have never believed there is any political advantage accruing to a convention city."

Mr. Sheerin says it is probable the resolution passed during the closing session of the last Democratic convention instructing the national committee to provide for the admission of delegates, alternates and members of the press only at the next convention will not be observed. The matter was referred to a sub-committee and he understands this committee will report at the coming meeting in favor of admitting the public as heretofore.

TROUBLE FOR BRAZIL.

Movement in Favor of a Monarchy Growing.

Rio Janeiro, Nov. 15.—Persons who arrived here yesterday from Netherthorpe announce the shooting there of twenty-seven political prisoners Sunday morning. Among them were two colonels. This has caused the greatest excitement in all circles, and nothing else is talked of. The executed are known to have been in sympathy with the monarchical cause, which is daily gaining ground. It is stated that many of the officers of the army and navy have sworn to join the movement, and many officers now operating in the south against the rebellion also favor it. It is also stated that both England and Germany will favor the movement, and the plan is to place a German prince on the throne of Brazil, probably Prince Henry of Prussia.

Last Echo of Great Northern Strike.

New York, Nov. 15.—J. J. Hill, president of the Great Northern railroad company, in an interview said: "The strike on the Great Northern is dead. Some 100 men went out and their names were filled at once. They were told they should present their grievances to the proper authorities and that these would then be carefully considered. They seem to have been infected, however, with the Indians' ghost dance. This defection is the last echo of the strike of last year."

Agricultural Chemistry.

Chemistry as the handmaiden of agriculture has achieved a wonderful success. Fertilizing the fields has not only become a well understood business, but is an exact science. There are methods of recovering waste products and utilizing heretofore useless matter. It is known what is required to produce the best potatoes and other crops, each one having supplied to it the chemical necessities of its existence. Land, sea and the elements are taxed to furnish the constituents necessary to the best growth of vegetation. It would have been a surprise to our ancestors had they been told that there are common plants which derive a very small portion of their subsistence from the soil, but are fed from the air and water; therefore, to understand the theories of drainage, rainfall, evaporation and absorption are matters of the utmost moment. To nothing does agriculture owe such a debt as to science, for by its means the waste places of the earth can be made productive, and by the introduction of new chemical elements malarial and unwholesome soils are made fertile and transformed into healthy and agreeable dwelling places.

A New Peril.

"Yes," said little Jim to his juvenile friend, "I'm goin' ter run away from home."

"And fight Indians?"

"I don't know about that. But I'm goin' ter get away from what's comin'. I've had paw's trousers cut down to fit me, an never found fault. But since maw got a wheel and is wearin' bloomers, I'm taking no more chances."—Washington Star.

Scrofula from Infancy

Troubled my daughter. At times her head would be covered with sores and running sores. We were afraid she would become blind. We had to keep her in a dark room.

We began to give her Hood's Sarsaparilla, and soon we saw that she was better in every respect. The sores have now all healed. I had a severe attack of the grip, was left in bad condition with muscular rheumatism and lumbago. Since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla

THE GALLERY GOSDS.

OUTSPOKEN CRITICS WHO SIT IN THE CHEAP SEATS NEAR THE CEILING.

The Kind of Plays and Players That Please the Habitués of the "Heaven"—Their Fondness For Particular Actors and Actresses—How They Applaud.

This is all because St. Louisans have their dramatic opinions made to order. Attractions before reaching here have been tried by the fire of eastern criticism. The local theater goer, a most indolent appreciator, accepts the dicta of others rather than energize sufficiently to formulate an opinion of his own. In this atmosphere of Philistinism the gallery is stifled. Indeed on the rare occasions on which it has attempted to assert its independence, physical force has been employed to coerce it into uniformity with the pit.

A case in point occurred some years ago, when Mary Anderson brought here her all English production of "A Winter's Tale." Mary was had enough, but her troop of barnstorming cockneys were too much for the gallery. The pit and boxes were filled with the elite of the city, and they were in ecstasy over a production that had visibly charmed the Prince of Wales. But the "gods" could not understand the thick speech of the Englishmen nor appreciate their stilted action. Undaunted by the display of fashion, they boldly gaped the performance. Four ushers were pretty badly beaten for attempting to restore order, and a relay of scene shifters was finally necessary to bring about quiet. There were a dozen broken heads as the result of the evening, and there has not been a noisy gallery in either the Grand or Olympic since.

One of the marked characteristics of the gallery boys—there are others—is his fondness for particular actors or actresses. The late Lawrence Barrett was a redhot favorite with the gallery boys from one end of the country to the other. This may have been due to the widely circulated story that in early life he was a newsboy, and his name was Larry Brannigan. There was food for hope in this for every stage-struck youngster in the land. A long way off and in another direction is Sadie Hasson, who wears a trapper's outfit and shoots Indians with marvelous indiscretion. She is the ideal woman to more than half the factory boys in the big cities of the country, and her youthful admirers lie awake at night dreaming of her mimic prowess and wondering why their own mothers and sisters cannot be molded along such heroic lines.

The persistent feud with the gallery boys is the modern melodrama, with its superb scenic accessories and climaxes by mechanical devices. He wants action for his admission, and a play like "Rebellious Susan" would not interest him ten minutes. It is the show that can produce the greatest number of happenings on an act that gets his coin the oftenest. These are the kind of shows they put on at Havlin's, clean, wholesome shows, apt to give a boy exaggerated ideas of life, it is true, but not calculated to warp his moral fiber.

One night during the week a Republic reporter climbed to the gallery of Havlin's. It was packed to the roof, and as bathing is not part of the daily curriculum of the habitués it was a trifle trying. The gods did not seem to mind it. They were packed in sweltering rows from the railing to the seats at the top, in which, when one is seated, he must bend forward lest his head strike the ceiling. Nearly all had removed their coats and loosened their shirt fronts. Some chewed tobacco, others ate fruit or munched peanuts. All were in a happy frame of mind. There was a German knockout comedian holding the stage while the sensational climax was being set. All his jokes were given in a personal turn and hurled back and forth among acquaintances. The rally was keen and intensely personal, but seemed to arouse no ill feeling. Suddenly the actor began gazing at an imaginary person in the gallery. Quick as a flash the crowd had picked on a real victim in the shape of a sleepy looking youth in a row far down the front. Seven hundred pairs of eyes turned on the poor fellow, and as many tongues shot pointed remarks at him. It was the cruel wit of thoughtless youth.

Then the scene changed, and every one straightened out and leaned forward, for the climax of the play was about to come. The villain rushed on and climbed up a telegraph pole and tapped a wire only to learn that the police were after him and had been notified by his rival. The mere tapping incident was heartily appreciated. Then the hero comes on. "Why have you pursued and betrayed me?" asks the villain amid impressive solemnity. Slowly comes back the answer, "Because you have come between me and the woman I love." Like a sharp crack of thunder comes a roar of glad appreciation from the gallery. Then the pair clinch. In an instant the whole gallery is in an uproar. Every one is on his feet.

"Kill him!" "Grab him by the neck!" "Bite him!" Thus comes the chorus of yells from the excited spectators. The hero is overpowered amid groans from the gallery and thrust into an outhouse; the girl comes on and meets a similar fate. The villain then sets fire to the barn in which his rival is locked. The flames lap out. Not a sound is heard in the gallery. Then the girl appears. She has climbed out on the roof and is making her way through a network of telegraph wires to the burning shed.

The faintest suspicion of a cheer rolls across the gallery at her appearance, but it quickly dies, so mighty is the suspense. Step by step the girl draws near the end of her journey. Inch by inch the gallery has risen to its feet. Not a word is spoken, hardly a breath is drawn. The girl reaches the opposite pole, climbs down and with an ax chops her way into the burning building and drags her lover out. Not until the heroine has reached the center of the stage does the gallery let go, and then a mighty cheer breaks loose. After the first shock of the collapse it comes again. The yelling is kept up until all the pent up energy accumulated during the progress of the climax is worn off.

A moment later they are all in the street, reveling in a breath of fresh air, and everybody discussing the tremendous advantage of a wire walking sweetheart. —St. Louis Republic.

French Are Stay at Home.

One reason why the French are not successful in colonizing is found in their intense attachment to their birthplace. Americans will be surprised to learn that $1,000,000 of the $8,000,000 inhabitants of France live in the towns where they were born. —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

PEACEMAKER OF THE PIUTES.

Captain Sides Preaches Temperance and Keeps the Indians Peaceable.

"The Peacemaker of the Piutes" is what Indians and whites alike call Captain Sides, a queer Nevada character, who is one of the oldest Indian interpreters and peacemakers in the service of the United States. For a score of years he has been the chief interpreter of the Piutes, and on many occasions his timely advice to the Indians has prevented the shedding of blood. No one knows better than he that mixing Indians and firewater has much the same effect as mixing fire and gunpowder. Consequently he loses no opportunity of preaching temperance to the Piutes. He warns them against drinking whisky, against beating their wives and against having Indian medicine men when they are sick. "If you have Indian doctors," he says sententiously, "your neck is stretched." He does not pretend to have any decided opinions as to merits or demerits of the allopathic and homeopathic schools of medicine, but he does know that the Indian medicine man is a quack of the thirty-third degree.

Captain Sides is a Piute himself, and succeeded to his present office when his brother, Captain Charley Sides, who had been peacemaker for many years in Nevada and California, went to the happy hunting grounds. During his 20 years of service Captain Johnson Sides has probably done more to prevent trouble and to civilize the Indians than any other man in the two states. Several years ago the Piutes at Obispo Creek absorbed considerable firewater, donned warpaint and feathers and began terrorizing the country.

Sides had a short powwow with the unruly red men. He told them to scrape off their war paint, throw away their whisky bottles, return to their reservation and obey the laws of the whites. His eloquence had a good effect, and the Indians quickly quieted down.

Sides believes that the Indians' only hope is to accept civilization, learn all they can and leave firewater alone. Last winter he placed 62 pupils in the Indian school at Fort Independent, and he aids the Piutes in getting work and in many other ways.

A BOY PRINCE IN TERROR.

Fanning Island Royalty Fairly Stunned by Civilization in San Francisco.

New York has been making a great deal of fuss over a duke of late, and San Francisco is now entertaining a king and a real, live prince, King Grieg and Prince George Grieg of Fanning Island. The king has left his island home in order to place the prince in a San Francisco school. There are four more children, and in the fullness of time they also will be given the advantages of a good California education, if the king succeeds in getting his salary regularly when the whistles blow Saturday nights.

Prince George is part American and part native islander. His grandfather and father both married handsome native women and George has very dark hair and a dark complexion. He has white teeth, and looks more like a Spaniard than anything else. Until his arrival at San Francisco his entire life had been passed among the natives of the island, and what he did not know about the English language and American institutions would fill all the books in a large library.

Civilization was a great shock to him when he first reached San Francisco.

PRINCE GEORGE OF FANNING ISLAND.

The dense smoke hovering over the city as the steamer approached reminded him of south sea volcanoes, the hills covered with houses made him rub his astonished eyes and wonder if the vision were not a dream, and the roar and rush of city life dazed him. The cable cars moving swiftly along the streets without any visible means of propulsion were terrible mysteries, the deadly trolley quite naturally excited his alarm, and the screeching, puffing locomotives—the first he had ever seen—fairly threw him into a princely panic.

King Grieg inherited from his father his domain in the Pacific south of the Hawaiian Islands, and a number of years ago John Bull, with his usual kindness, took the island in out of the wet, metaphorically speaking.

For Business Men Only.

No man can successfully conduct a business of any kind who does not advertise judiciously. It is an expense in modern business methods which can no more be avoided than clerk hire or rent. Cast over in your mind's eye the people who have failed in business within the last two or three years, and you will find that with few exceptions they have been those who thought it did not pay to advertise and persisted in adhering to their theory until they had nothing to advertise. Think of the business men whom you know to be successful, and you will find their names and business set forth in terms which cannot fail to catch the eye. Of course advertising is not all there is in business; it must be backed by prudence and judgment. But it is the keystone to the arch which sustains the whole business structure, and he who neglects it will fall sooner or later.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND and all the members of his Cabinet are setting a good example for other democrats by declining to express for publication their opinions of the party's defeat. This is all the more creditable to them because they could, if so disposed, truthfully call attention to the fact that the most crushing defeats have occurred in the states in which the campaigns were personally managed by anti-administration democratic Senators. President Cleveland, as well as the members of his Cabinet, have some decided opinions on this subject is certain, but it is fortunate for the party that they have the good judgment to keep to themselves at this time, when the rank and file of the party, who are neither responsible for nor have taken any part in the bickerings, are smarting under a defeat which they believe to be undeserved. It is a matter that should only be discussed in private.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gundersen, of Dimondale, Mich.: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist church at River Junction, she was brought down with pneumonia succeeding La Grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results." Trial bottles free at the H. D. McCulloch Co.'s drug store. Regular size, 50c and $1.00.
